THE FOREIGN POLICY OF HITLER'S GERMANY

The Diplomatic Revolution in Europe, 1933–36

Gerhard L. Weinberg

Gerhard Weinberg has written the first comprehensive work on Nazi foreign policy and the origins of World War II. The book deals with Hitler's long-term goals and short-term methods, in internal affairs as well as foreign policy, and documents the diplomatic revolution by which Germany changed from a tolerated equal to the dominant power in Europe by the end of 1936. The rearmament of Germany and its departure from the League of Nations, the new orientation in German policy toward Poland and the Soviet Union, the German intervention in the Spanish Civil War, and many other key topics are examined from a new perspective.

USES AND ABUSES OF POLITICAL POWER

A Case Study of Continuity and Change in the Politics of Ghana

Maxwell Owusu

Owusu traces the political and social development of the Agona people of Swedru from the end of the seventeenth century to 1966. He shows how traditional institutions have adapted or failed to adapt to Eurocolonial domination and urbanization, decolonization, and the one-party state which has emerged. The author shows that political instability and the problem of national unity in such developing countries as Ghana are due mainly to the struggle of the elites and their followers for economic power, following a pattern established in precolonial days.

Second Edition

THE THIRD WORLD

Peter Worsley

In his preface to the second edition, Peter Worsley explains why the details of his argument need not be updated, and he invites the reader to evaluate the continuity between the analysis presented in the new "postscript" chapter and the argument of the original. Also included is a supplementary bibliography relating to the new chapter.
